NEW ROADS IN BELL COUNTY
NOW SURETY

Fiscal Court Votes $250,000 to Apply
On Road From Page to Harlan
Line, to Colmar and Fonde
Mines

WILL GREATLY INCREASE PINE-VILLE, MIDDLESBORO BUSINESS

Two hundred and a fifty thousand dollars worth of Bell County bonds were ordered sold by the fiscal court in session at Pineville yesterday. Of this amount $165,000 will be applied on road from Page to Harlan and the rest on two mine roads, one from Middlesboro to Fonde and the other from the Middlesboro road to Colmar.

This is the greatest economic step that has been made in progress of Bell County for some time. When these roads, supplemented by federal aid, have been completed, Middlesboro and Pineville will be trading centers for thousands otherwise shut off from them because of the impassable roads, and these cities will be well on their way to their "millennium."

The distance from the Middlesboro road to Colmar is four miles, the place where the Colmar road branches off being about two miles from Middlesboro. The completion of this road will bring approximately the entire Colmar trade to Middlesboro.

It is twelve miles across the mountain from Middlesboro to Fonde by the route being surveyed for the new road. The completion of this will open a very important section of Bell County hitherto undeveloped and will tap the rich mining centers of Clear Fork Coal and Coke Co., High Cliff, Back Creek and Valley Creek with their population of near fifteen thousand people.

These people have done their trading and put their money, up to this time, in Jellico, which is thirty miles from them. They are nearly all from Middlesboro or this vicinity originally, however, and they are bound to bring business here when a good road is opened up making it only twelve miles here.

The road from Page to the Harlan line will open up this section and, connecting with the road nearly completed from Harlan to Harlan County line, will make a through highway from the prosperous Harlan mining centers to Pineville and Middlesboro. An incalculable amount of business will be brought into the county in this way, disregarding the added advantage of having so much easier communication at all times between these two great counties.

Major E. S. Hellburn and W. A. Bowman have been appointed as commissioners by the court to let contracts for the roads to Colmar and Fonde. Other commissioners will be named for the Page road.

ASKS GIRLS TO PICK SOLDIER HUSBANDS

General Pershing Hopes Time Will Come When Girls Demand Man
Be One Time Volunteer

By Associated Press.
MOUNT GRETNA, July 17.—General Pershing wants American girls to pick husbands from men who served in the national guard. Speaking to Pennsylvania guardsmen yesterday he said he hoped the day would come when every American girl would demand the man who sought her in marriage be one who served a time as a volunteer. "I am going to say a word in the ear of the American girls for that purpose," he added.

URGES MAKING OF RED CROSS CHRISTMAS BAGS

W. S. Anderson, president of the local Red Cross chapter, said today that he had had no answers to the appeal he made last week through the columns of this paper for volunteers to make Christmas bags for men in the service. He asked that this work be taken up by church societies or other organizations interested in such work. Middlesboro's quota is ten bags and he does not want to fall down on this. The bags must be complete by November 1.

Acid Poured on Her Body to Force
Information On Oil Deal—
Abandoned in Okmulgee

By Associated Press.
OKMULGEE, Okla., July 17.—A woman giving her name as Mrs. George Patrop of Tulsa groped her way into police station here last night with a story of abduction and torture. She left here today with the mystery of her alleged experiences unsolved. She gave a hysterical account of being kidnapped on a Tulsa street by four men and women who poured acid on her arms, breast and legs in an effort to wring from her information regarding an oil transaction in Sapulpa. Investigation shows she was painfully burned. Police sent her to a hotel which she left today with four heavily armed men. She told police she was brought here on a train and abandoned in the street.

SOLDIERS' MESSAGE FROM ROOSEVELT

Was Sent To Army Five Years Ago
at Time Death of Quentin
Roosevelt

By Associated Press.
INDIANAPOLIS, July 17.—The only personal message of Theodore Roosevelt to America's soldiers in France, written five years ago today on the day he received word of the death of his son Quentin, is for the first time being delivered to world war fighters through 11,000 posts of the American Legion.

The message was given to Cass Conway, of Buffalo, N. Y., who was a Y. M. C. A. worker in France, but did not come to the attention of the fighting men because Mr. Conway's duties in France prevented him from attending to the matter. On July 15, 1918, Mr. Conway requested a word from Roosevelt to the men at the front. Despite the fact that he had received word of Quentin's death that day, the message was written by Roosevelt, on July 17, and reads as follows:

"To the soldiers of the American Expeditionary Force overseas:
"I send my heartiest greetings to you men at the front. You have made all of us who stayed behind lift our heads high with pride by what you are doing. It is you men, and only you men, who are doing the one vital work for the American people today. All good Americans at this time owe homage to the fighting men at the fighting front. What you are doing is vital for the honor and interest, for the future welfare and for the existence of our republic; and you are also battling for the liberty of every well-behaved, civilized nationality, big or little.

"I congratulate you on the great good fortune that is yours in that you now have the chance to endure hardships and peril for a great ideal, and to render to our country the greatest of all services. I would give anything to be over with you.

Faithfully yours,
"Theodore Roosevelt."

of "Truth Serum" in California Brings "Confessions"

Dr. Robert E. House, second from right administering his "truth serum" test to volunteer prisoners in Los Angeles county jail. On left is Deputy district attorney Fricke and (right) Dr. H. B. Custer.

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—"Truth serum" tests on county jail prisoners here, following those at San Quentin penitentiary, apparently leave the guilty conscious without a hole to hide in, not even the shadowy lies of the mind. Clinically, if not legally, the amnesic "third degree" seems to have been established as potentially the most effective crime detector and deterrent. In these experiments by Dr. Robert E. House of Paris, Tex., its originator.

Six jail inmates to Dr. House's injection of scopolamine, a drug hitherto used extremely in obstetrics and now employed by the Texas physician to elicit the facts in criminal investigations.

Three gave details in connection with their cases not known to authorities. All imbibed innocuous in the present charges, but several confessed to former offenses. Two, according to officers, changed their previous stories.

Former Officer

The demonstration, in the presence of medical and legal lights, was primarily to further Dr. House's appeal that the scopolamine or "truth test" treatment be legalized as an adjunct to criminality. No effort was made to test the reluctant, and it was assumed that only the innocent volunteered.

A former police officer, under the drug, denied receipt of stolen goods in box-car holdups. He mentioned the name of two men he said were guilty, and the district attorney jotted down the information.

An alleged forger, up for trial, admitted inducing the questioned check.

M'ADOO TELLS RELATION WITH MORSE BUILDERS

Says He Was Attorney for Company
Accused of Defrauding Government in War Time Ship Building—Owned No Stock

SAYS HE NEVER HEARD AC-CUSATIONS AGAINST CLIENT

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 17.—William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury in the cabinet of Wilson was witness today in the trial of Charles W. Morse and his associates, charged with defrauding the government in their war time shipbuilding contracts. The witness said he was called into the case as attorney for the Virginia Shipbuilding company, a Morse subsidiary, which built ships for the Emergency Fleet Corporation. He denied that he was interested in the company except as its counselman and was only seeking payment of company's claim against the government for a million, four hundred thousand dollars.

McAdoo testified his firm received a fixed fee of fifty thousand dollars from the Morses and about thirty three thousand dollars as commission in connection with the award to the Morses of a certain cargo carrying contract. He told the court he owned no stock in the Morse company and never heard of any shipping board official accuse his clients of attempting to defraud the government. He added his firm was holding notes for $88,000 for services and commissions from the Morses.

but denied writing anything "on the front of it."

A Pasadena youth accused of attacking girls repeated at length that he did not know the names of any of his alleged victims, but according to official witnesses admitted having used "dope" until a year ago.

Others Talk

A man facing trial as a "dope" peddler, admitted, said authorities, that he had been arrested four times previously, but was guiltless of the present charge, naming as his partner a man wanted by police.

A man convicted of parole breaking, said he had been arrested "many times."

A man awaiting appeal on life sentence for murder, and "fighting" the anesthetic, vehemently denied guilt, asserting he didn't even know the name of the slain woman.

As the subjects lay inert on cots, after hypodermic injections of scopolamine and application of chloroform, whispering their confessions to the sharp queries from Dr. House, the scene took on the drama of scientific pioneering. One had the uncanny sense of peering into the cerebral storehouse of ultimate secrets—of prying a hitherto inviolable citadel of self, while the gatekeeper of the brain snored.

Helpless!
"Under the influence of scopolamine as here administered," said Dr. House, as he worked expertly, "a suspected criminal is rendered oblivious to existence. Apprehension of environment is eliminated. The willpower is inoperative."

"In such state, if the individual is questioned the moment he can hear, there is no doubt that his replies will be the truth. He is helpless to protect himself with inventions.

"The principal involved is based on clinical observations that the brain's most powerful center is hearing, and also the last to succumb. It is the first to function under anesthetic. Now the only function of the auditory nerve, when stimulated by a question, is to carry sound waves to the auditory center, and the only function of this center is to evoke memory."

"My method of securing from the mind the stored contents of memory, against the will, under scopolamine anesthesia, is a harmless and humane 'third degree'."

Reduce Expense

"It is proved successful in only 50 per cent of cases it is far more reliable than any other method of criminal duress. Legalized, and its power popularized, it would go far to eliminate gang crimes, since arrest of one would mean the names of all.

"It would, with corroboration of course, enable reluctant suspects to acquit themselves; obviate the necessity of immunity to known criminals; clean prisoners of the guiltiness; reduce enormously the government expense for controlling crime."

Dr. House has turned over the findings of seven years of research with his discovery to the American Research Anesthetic Association in the hope that they will take the initiative toward eventual legal recognition of the "truth drug" as a means of ferreting and combating crime.

SEIZE $300,000
WORTH OF LIQUOR

Forty Dry Agents Raid Lakewood, Fashionable New Jersey Resort Today

By Associated Press.
LAKEWOOD, N. J., July 17.—Liquor valued at $300,000 was seized in raids here early today by forty prohibition agents. Lakewood is a fashionable resort popular with the wealthy the year around. Sixty cases were seized at Hotel Marion. At Bartlett Inn behind sliding wall panels, shelves were found filled with liquors and behind pictures on the wall. A window was found leading to a storeroom under the porch where seventy-five cases were discovered. No one arrested but the liquor was confiscated.

HARDING EXPRESSES VIEW ON SAVING

Blames Reckless Spending for Uncertain Business Conditions—Urges Thrift

President Harding has often shown his interest in the savings movement and has personally invested in Treasury Savings Certificates, the valuable savings security issued by the U. S. Treasury Department. In a speech at Salt Lake City, Utah, the President said:

"The world, its Government, its quasi-public corporations, its people acquired the spending habit during the war to an extent not merely unprecedented but absolutely alarming. There is but one way for the community finally to get back on its feet and that is to go seriously about paying its debts and reducing its expenses. That is what the world must face. The greatest and richest Government must face it and so must the humblest citizen."

"No habit is so easy to form, none so hard to break, as that of reckless spending. And on the other side, none is more certain to contribute to secure happiness than the habit of thrift, of savings, of careful management in all business concerns, of balanced budgets and living within incomes."

"If I could urge upon the American people a single rule applicable to every one of them as individuals, and to every political or corporate unit among them, it would be to learn to spend some what less than your income all the time. If you have debts, reduce them as rapidly as you can; if you are one of the fortunate few who have no debts, make it a rule to save something every year."

"I would have our Government adequate in every locality and in every activity, and public sentiment will demand it and secure it, and require no more, if we may have the simple and thrifty life which makes the healthful nation."

NEGRO WOMAN SHOT SUNDAY
BY PORTER, LATTER ARRESTED

Mary Sunflower Malone, colored, was painfully wounded by John Barran at her home in the negro settlement in Northeast Middlesboro Sunday afternoon. He has been bound to the grand jury on a charge of malicious shooting and wounding, the amount of the bond being $500.

Barran, incited by jealousy, is said to have entered her home in an intoxicated condition and to have fired three shots only one of which took effect. Deputy J. C. Mitchell, hearing the shots, was on the scene a few minutes afterwards. He called a doctor for the wounded woman while police officers made the arrest.

John Barran is a Walash hotel porter.

WEEDS BEING CUT ON SOME OF CITY'S VACANT LOTS

Weeds are being cut on some vacant lots in the center of the city. On the vacant property on Lathbury avenue between Nineteenth street and the city hall, the work has been started. At other places similar jobs are in their early stages.

On the canal banks through the heart of the city tall weeds continue to flourish. On a number of vacant lots and odd corners no efforts have been made to cut them.

Violators of the city ordinance providing that such weeds must be cut are subject to a fine.

Five Majority in Senate for Next Session

SEE TROUBLE AHEAD FOR ADMINISTRATION MEASURES

By Associated Press.
ST. PAUL, July 17.—Johnson's lead was increased to 53,000 when incomplete returns from every county in the state were received.

ST. PAUL, July 17.—Magnus Johnson Farmer-Labor candidate was elected to the United States senatorship over Governor Pross, Republican, in yesterday's balloting. He increased his lead to 28,561 when 1814 of the state's 3250 precincts reported unofficially today. James A. Carley, Democrat, polled approximately fourteen thousand votes. Johnson's vote was 176,314.

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The election of Magnus Johnson, senator from Minnesota, leaves the Republicans with only a nominal majority of five in the senate. As the roster now stands, there are fifty Republicans, forty-three Democrats and two Farmer-Labor with a vacancy in Vermont which probably will be filled by a Republican. Even with a majority of six Republicans, leaders concede they will have difficulty holding in line sufficient strength to put through administration measures.

Arras of Greensburg, Penn., and Roe Fulkerson, editor of the Kiwanis Magazine, a native Tennessean. Jules Brazil, the noted Canadian song leader and entertainer has promised to be here. Other musical features will be the Chattanooga male quartet which made such a hit at the convention last year, the Nashville Glee Club, the LaFollette Kiwanis band, and a good jazz orchestra. These will be interspersed with other equally entertaining attractions.

Too Much Gravel Removed From First
Block, Decision of Mayor and City Authorities

Too much of the surface of Cumberland avenue between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets has been removed and will have to be refilled to make it on a level with the adjoining block, according to a statement made by Mayor J. H. Keeney this afternoon.

But very little of the gravel below the black cast of it and it will be left just as it is.

The grading continued on the first block until the dirt was reached. Many citizens and property owners continued to voice the opinion that the graders were going too deeply. Today several of them have talked with the mayor and engineers on the subject.

A THOUGHT

I will bring the blind by a way that they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight.—Isa. 42:16.

THE INDUSTRIOUS SELDOM FORSAKEN

Generally speaking, there is now a job in this country for every man who wants one. This holds true in almost every community. The Mayor in one enterprising city of 50,000 people is determined that the industrious members of that community shall profit accordingly, without having to support any idlers. He is having a list made of all the able-bodied loafers in town and holding it for future reference. The loafers are duly warned that if they apply for help next winter, as many of them have done in previous winters, there will be "nothing doing."

This is a commendable policy, if carried out with proper discrimination. It is a historic American principle, handed down from colonial days, that "the who will not work shall not eat." There is less need of that drastic rule now than there was in the days of pioneer hardship or during the recent war, yet it is as just as it ever was, and as wholesome for those to whom it is applied.

Let professional loafers be discouraged by every means possible, in time of plenty as in times of stress. Then, when genuine need does come, it will be less severe.—Paris Kentuckian-Citizen.

SEE KENTUCKY FIRST

In a special dispatch sent from aboard the United States transport Henderson, on which the President yesterday was making his way toward Seward, Mr. Harding was quoted as saying that he believed that the Alaska problem, that of what is to be done with the vast territory now lying dormant and stagnant because of governmental neglect, is to become one of the paramount problems facing the American government in the next twenty years.

Lack of roads is presented as one of the greatest problems affecting this great land.

The total area of Alaska is 580,000 square miles—about one-fifth as large as the United States proper. In those nearly 600,000 square miles are mineral, food and timber wealth that is incalculable. All it needs is development.

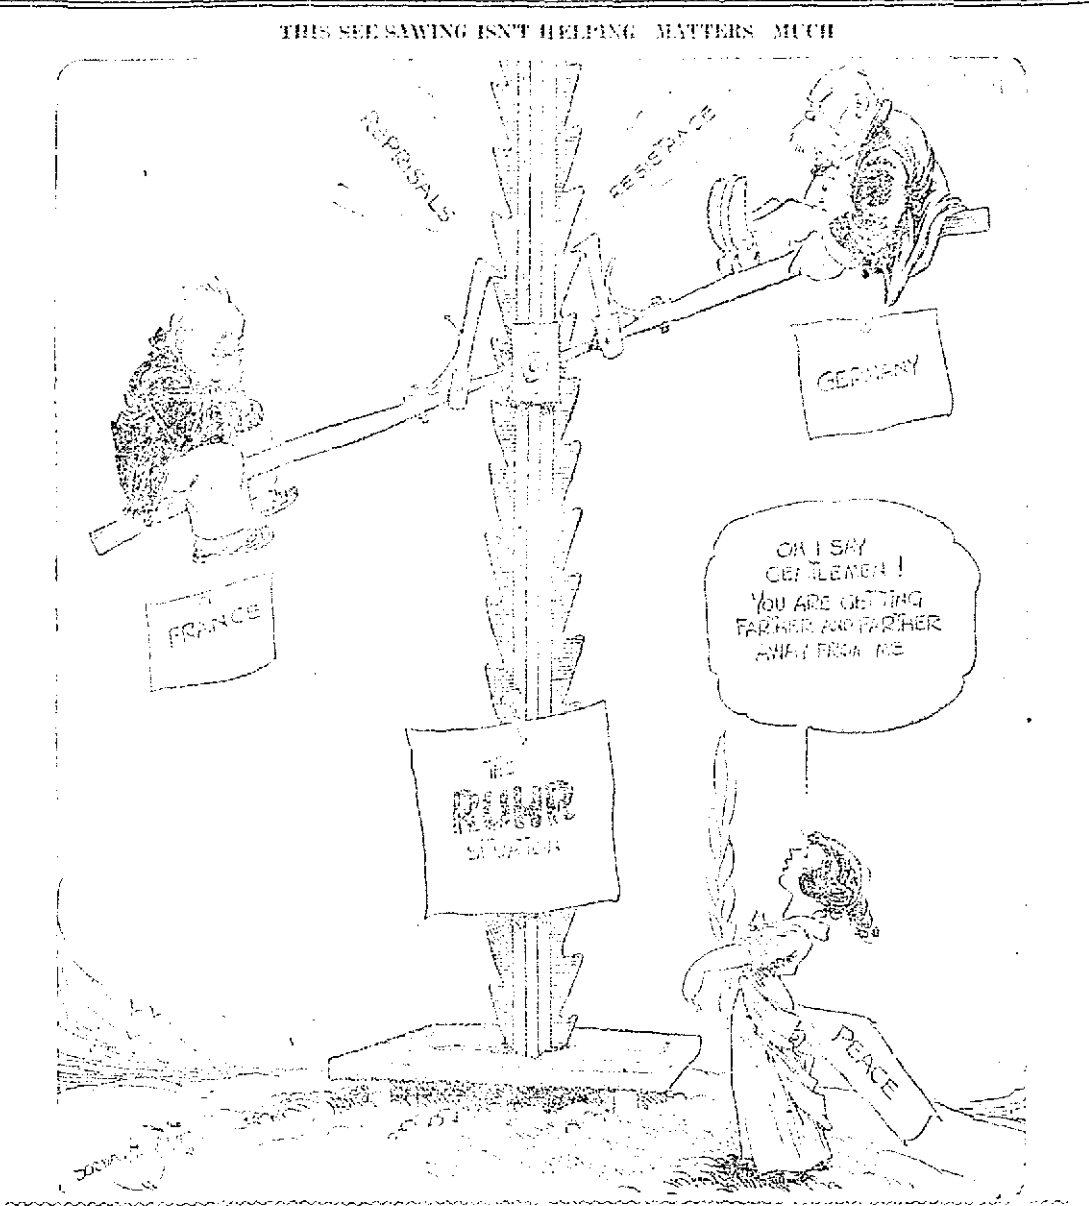

So much for Alaska. Kentuckians desiring to see a land with the hilltops rugged and the valleys are green, where the streams sing as they follow their courses over which the skies are blue, need not go on any July jaunts.

The Kentucky river, winding its way through a valley equal almost to that described by Rustin in "The King of the Golden River," with its cliffs standing guard over its peaceful course like mighty sentinels, accords only some truthful successor to Phineas T. Barnum to call the world's attention to its magnificence and make of it a haven for summer tourists.

They can find here as matchless scenery as in Alaska, or any other place in the world.

And if, of more serious bent, some Kentuckians desire to spend their summer studying the problems of a great tract of land, they don't have to go to Alaska either.

There is no need for Kentuckians to envy the President of the United States in his harem-like voyage. The cruise of the Henderson can be depicted in a river or a canal.

Hundreds of acres of land, bearing riches within their bosom of natural value, claimed in timber of incalculable intrinsic value! What is this a description of?

Is it Alaska, Mr. Gallagher?
No, Kentucky, Mr. Sheen.

The greatest problem faced is that of roads. The transportation story of neglect on the part of a government of a territory acquired by purchase from Russia is no more striking than the story of the meadowland, won by the courage of those who blazed the Wilderness trail from Virginia, through the narrow gap in the Cumberland, and concentrated the lives of those who survived the hardships of the forest and the attacks of the savages as well as by the deaths of the fallen, who knew faith alone, and never fear.

In an address in Lexington, Dr. H. H. Jones, scientist with the Road-path championship, pointing to the failure of business and government to cooperate with science, declared that other states, not nearly equalling Kentucky in natural resources, were spending scores of times what Kentucky appropriated for the study of how these resources might best be developed.

The Robinson Foundation, which makes possible a forest reserve in Kentucky and a study of timber problems upon an experimental tract development under the auspices of the University of Kentucky, is a step in the right direction.

Kentuckians have slow to awake to the problems of their own state. Writing in American Forestry, Tom Wallace, chief of the editorial staff of the Louisville Times, who recently spoke upon Kentucky's forestry problems in Lexington, called attention to the fact that Kentucky originally had 15,000 square miles of forest in a total area of 41,000 square miles. Turning to the future, he writes:

Nowadays, our politicians drive their automobiles between poles of telephone poles through deforested regions.

The emphasis is here in many sections. Yet the possibility remains and offers a challenge.

What of the great commonwealth in which a candidate for the chief party's nomination for governor had to use an airplane to go from one county to another in order to fill an engagement, because the only open road was over the hills and through the clouds?

The President of the United States is not to be criticised for trying to increase the interest of the people of the United States in their northern state.

But are Kentuckians less interested for their own state, their home problem?

Kentucky has played Rip Van Winkle for long enough.

Between the lines of the declarations of the chief executive of the United States, as he travels through Alaska there may be read an implicit message to the people of Kentucky, and it is this:

"Wake up!"—Lexington Herald.

THE OPEN FORUM

A Retraction

Editor Daily News: In an article in the "open forum" over my signature some time ago, I quoted Dr. Rother and Ford E. Daugherty, minister of the Presbyterian Church, as asking me the question, "If you go to hell will you be disappointed?"

Since Dr. Douglas insists that he did not use the word "hell" and as I am not positive that he did not in view of the fact that I regret to have hurt a fellow man's feelings, I make this statement in fairness to him, because I do not believe he would deny a statement that he had made, and also the fact that the two ministers present corroborate his statement.

Unlucky Robbush

Editor Daily News: There is a large pile of unsightly and unluckily rubbish on the vacant place at the rear of the Crystal Cafe, the End pool room and the bar's barber shop. The police department and the board of health have been notified of this condition, but there is no effort to remove it. I do not know whether the men were told by the police to clean up the place or not.

What can we do in cases of this kind? Such rubbish heaps are not only unsightly but are a reflection upon the other people who live in the neighborhood. I understand that there is a city law against allowing such trash but I have never heard of its being enforced.

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO HER FRIEND, EDWIGE GRIMSHAW

Dear Edwige:

I don't know from some of the letters you have been writing me lately, but you are thinking very seriously of leaving your young man.

I have only one question to ask. Is he an orphan?

You have told me that he was an orphan, and that when he came to college you met him and his mother. I will allow you are laying up for yourself great misapprehensions in my class here.

Why is it, Edwige, that neither of us are trying to marry off their daughters and always trying to find out to their cost?

I expect, Edwige, would have an explanation for this, but surely all mothers must know that they can only marry their daughters to some other mother's son.

You saw Jack's mother at the wedding and at a that singular, prize-matched old man trotted around with her. Well, that's the old man who wanted Jack to marry if she couldn't keep him married.

Unfortunately for her, Jack tells me that his mother is the most likable one in all the world. Anyway at least my mother turns up at the corners and here's them down, and I got Mrs. Prescott's darling boy and Priscilla Bradford did not.

Up to date Jack has been on my side of a controversy in which his mother and Miss Bradford seem to imply that I am an extravagant, frivolous flirt. But, please, I am frightened to death. Sometime I am going to do something which I shall consider perfectly innocent and this Bradford woman is going to see it, put her own construction on it and Jack is going to believe it.

There, I have warned you against that pitfall. Now there is another which looms no even bigger than a jelly mother-in-law, and that is the money question.

I expected, Edwige, that it is because every man before marriage has spent his own money just as he darned pleased and had no responsibility except his own free will, that it takes him quite a while to get it into his head that in this partnership we call marriage, the man is the receiver of all money of the firm and the woman should be the disburser of most of it. Jack, as you know, is one of the dearest men I have ever known. We have a charge account almost everywhere, but I have no money I can call my own. He just can't seem to get it through his head that there are things that cannot be charged, and when the first of the month comes in, he always finds fault with the bills.

Before you are married, Edwige, to this young man of yours, be sure that you have some sort of settlement on the money question. Honestly I am not in a fit of extravagance as Jack in fact. I have spent no money on myself personally since we were married. And privately I have tried to make the money Jack has received and the money I know has been paid out, balance, and I find that he should have quite a little more egg somewhere.

Up to date I have not inquired. Tomorrow I shall get so busy about it, many question that I will do so and then—well, then—

Yours, Leslie.

TOMORROW—Leslie to the "gay little Marquise"—Dinner with a strange couple.

BEYOND THE PALE
♦♦♦♦♦ By Berton Braley ♦♦♦♦♦

I try to love my fellow man. I do in all sincerity!
And it is very seldom that I fail. I know that I have every need for tolerance and charity.

And other folks are similarly frail. I can forgive a lot of things, from forswearing to homicide!

Most every sin that history reveals. But there's one sort of criminal who brushes all my censure aside—
The bird who wields a toothpick after meals!

I can forgive some guys who live a life of deep depravity.
But not the goof who probes in every tooth!

Who tries to trace within his face the locus of civility?
He drives me to insanity in truth!

I know that I have faults galore—too many to be numbering—
So I cannot be harsh upon a sinner. But mix upon the sort of man who mixes meals with lumbering!

The bird who wields a toothpick after dinner!

The lovely cottage in the guardian nook
Has stirred thee deeply; with its own dear brook,
Its own small pasture, almost its own sky!
But covet not the abode; forbear to sith.
As many do, repining while they look;
Intruders who could tear from Nature's book
This precious leaf, with harsh impiety.
Think what the home must be if it were thine.
Even thine, though few thy wants!
Roof, window, door,
The very flowers are sacred to the poor;
The roses to the porch which they entwine!
Yea, all that now enchants thee from the day
On which it should be touched, would melt away.—Wadsworth.

FORMER CLUB HEAD GIVES SUGGESTIONS

Mrs. H. G. Reynolds Wants Changes in Organization of Woman's Club

By Associated Press.

PADUCAH, Ky., July 16.—Mrs. H. G. Reynolds of this city, who retired as president of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs at the last convention, has offered several suggestions to the club women of the state for consideration between now and the next convention. Mrs. Reynolds' suggestions, "born of several years intimate contact and deep interest" in club work, as president in the current issue of The Club Woman, follow:

"There should be some method of closer and fewer communication between members of the executive committee. Either a third meeting during the year, or extension of time at the conference. A president gives the work 24 hours a day and it is utterly impossible for her to put it before the members of her committee in a few hours, twice a year. She needs their advice, their council and they need to be kept more closely in touch with the work. Many states hold monthly executive committee meetings. The same thing holds good with the board meetings. The same thing holds good with the board meetings. We need, and should have time for frank discussion of various problems which confront each officer.

"I would like to see some steps taken whereby the outgoing president succeeds to the General Federation Directors chair. This is logical and should be most advantageous to both organizations. It is conceded that the past president is invaluable to her State Executive Committee and as the person most intimately concerned was her state work, she is certainly the woman who should represent her state on the National board. The General Federation politely, but most firmly, hints that an untrained woman is of small service to either body she is attempting to represent.

"I feel that the office of State Auditor should be abolished. In the old days when we had a few hundred dollars sometimes it was all right for some women to ok. the report of the treasurer and let it pass, but that now thousands of dollars pass through the executive's hands annually, it is a grave injustice to her that her books are not audited by a paid expert. The General Federation has abolished this useless office.

"The value of slightly larger executive committee would be very great, and I should like to see one member from the Governors rank and none from the chairman of the departments. be included in the Executive Committee.

"We want to devise and put into operation some method of drawing our country into our club life. Our men and women county agents have paved their way for us there.

"Why can we not perfect a plan for the making of itineraries for speakers, lasting from four to ten dates? It would be so simple to do so, and would give the small club the same advantage as the large one.

"I want to call the attention of the chairman and others sending out printed matter, to the fact that they should consider the date.

"Our finances should be budgeted. I want to beg the further developments of the district work. The meetings should be attended by more of the officers, they should be conducted with the same dignity that the Annual Convention is and in fact should be encouraged to become miniature state meetings."

WHAT CONSTITUTES HOUSING SHORTAGE

Surplus of 10 Per Cent Each Kind of Building Necessary to Banish Shortage

Notwithstanding all that has been said and written concerning "housing shortages" during the last few years, most people have a very hazy idea as to what constitutes a shortage or surplus of houses. If the average man were asked what constitutes a normal housing supply, his reply probably would be: "One residence or one apartment available for each family in the community." Such a condition, however in reality would reflect a very serious shortage of houses, and make for abnormally high rentals for the reason, that there would be no surplus supply whatever, and no scope for the exercise of individual choice or preferences as to one's living quarters.

The foregoing facts are very clearly brought out in a recent magazine article by W. J. More, president of the American Bond & Mortgage Co., Chicago, in which he says:

From the building owner's standpoint, a well balanced normal supply of housing for any community may be said to exist when there are just enough apartments and dwellings of the sizes, kinds and locations desired, so that those offered for rent will command rentals sufficient to pay all proper fixed and operating expenses, including depreciation, plus a profit or interest return on the entire investment commensurate with the hazard of such investment. The minimum net return under present conditions would be 8 per cent in a developed, zoned and stabilized location.

From the renter's or tenant's standpoint, a normal supply exists when there is a sufficient number of apartments or dwellings to permit of choice in regard to size, kind and location, at a price no greater than will return to the owner a sum sufficient to maintain the integrity of his investment and pay a reasonable profit or interest on the investment.

Having in mind the greatest good for the greatest number, and keeping in mind also the future growth of a community, rentals should be based, not on 100 per cent occupancy but about 90 per cent. In other words, a surplus of about 10 per cent of each kind, size and price of apartments and dwellings should be maintained to create a reasonable balance or satisfactory relation between landlord and tenant.

Under such conditions, capital for real estate investments will be available at reasonable rates; tenants will have a reasonable range of choice at reasonable rentals; conditions will be attractive to outsiders seeking permanent locations; and the community will prosper.

HOME OWNING IS ON INCREASE

Economists Says Two Out of Every Five Homes in Country Now Owned by Occupants

Dr. Richard T. Ely, University of Wisconsin economist and director of the national institute of research in land economics and public utilities, has given out statistics compiled by that organization, tending to show the number of homes in the United States owned by occupants. Two out of every five homes in this country are owned by the people living therein, according to Dr. Ely. Federal census figures compiled by the bureau show that home ownership increased from 38.1 per cent in 1910 to 40.9 per cent in 1920. The 1930 figure was 39.9 per cent. Practically three out of every five owned homes are free from debt or mortgage. The figures show that of the 40.9 per cent, 24.7 per cent are free from debt and 16.2 per cent are encumbered.

Between 1890 and 1920 the average value of each of the 16.2 per cent-owned mortgaged homes increased from $3,250 to $4,328. The size of the mortgage increased from $1,293 to $2,102. This would indicate that owners of mortgaged homes are going deeper into debt than ever before. The mortgages on homes in 1890 averaged 39.5 per cent of the value of the home; in 1920 it averaged 46.2 per cent.

"The purchase of automobiles is said to be in many cases out of funds raised by borrowing on security of the home," says Dr. Ely. "Certainly many home mortgages remain unpaid because the surplus funds have gone into the purchase of automobiles."

BUILDING ASSOCIATION SHOWS GAIN PAST SIX MONTHS

The semiannual report of the Calcasieu Building & Loan Association reflects something of building activities in this section, showing as it does the volume of loans made during the last six months as compared to the first quarter of the year. The secretary's report indicates that 140 loans to prospective home owners were made during the six months period, amounting to $250,000, of which amount $127,300 was made during May and June. Loans on 55 homes were fully paid during the same period, which cleared encumbrances on homes amounting to $92,500.

The secretary's report further showed an increase in the demand for building money of approximately 50 per cent since the favorable decision in the deep water controversy.

EXPLAINS PROCESS STREET GRADING

Leveling Block Between Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets Necessary

In explaining the reasons for removing the old roadbed down to the original base on Cumberland avenue on the block already graded, J. C. Richardson, city engineer, states that more grading was necessary on the block between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets than will be on the blocks now being scarified.

On the block between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets the grade was practically reached this morning, he stated.

Numerous comments and inquiries have been made by the public, particularly property owners along Cumberland avenue about what appeared to them an unnecessary expense, the removal of all the old materials which had become firmly settled and the substitution of new rock or slag. Mr. Richardson is keeping a close check on the construction work in order that it may be done strictly in accordance with specifications.

The work was checked by the rain yesterday afternoon but this morning it was resumed. Scarifying of the block between Nineteenth and Twenty-first streets was begun this morning.

Orphans Not Wanted At Fashionable Long Beach

JUDGE GUSTAVE HARTMAN, WAGING FIGHT FOR ORPHANS AND MRS. AMMA B. FROTH, ONE OF THOSE WHO WON COURT ORDER AGAINST HIM.

NEW YORK, July 17.—One hundred and twenty-eight small orphans are to die sadly contemplating the future of their first organized efforts to find a home.

Filed by Justice Gustave Hartman, New York's bachelor judge, the orphans whose winter home is at the East Orphan Asylum down on New York's lower East Side, had looked forward to spending the summer amidst the fashionable colony which yearly migrates out to Long Beach and more particularly Long Beach.

The judge had leased a large and pretentious dwelling for them there—Belle Junke, the actress had lived in it once—and there the orphans were collecting their sand pails and wading what they should take along in their small suit cases.

But the fashionable and exclusive colony at Long Beach didn't want them. Not you understand, that the colony isn't a fond of an orphan as anybody in the world. Indeed, last year is Avenue burned down Long Beach got together and raised some thing like $20,000 to go toward rebuilding the place.

Put to have the orphans right to come into their very midst? Long Beach just couldn't see it. So they secured an injunction against the bachelor judge and his migrating orphans. The injunction has just been sustained.

Long Beach isn't the place for orphans, anyway. Says Mrs. Amma B. Froth, wife of Jesse Froth, president of the school board and prime mover in securing the injunction against the judge. It isn't merely that he was trying to break the laws of Long Beach by attempting to set up an institution in the midst of a very much restricted property section.

He was trying to lodge 128 orphans and 25 attendants in a building originally meant for 10 persons and set up on a lot 100 by 100 feet. There would be scarcely any place for the children to play and almost no shade. And right in front of the house is the bay six feet deep ordinarily and nine feet deep at high tide. How does the judge expect to keep the children from falling in? He says he will build a fence but that is ridiculous on a street of restricted property.

No Long Beach is no place for orphans.

But the bachelor judge feels differently about it. For one thing he was an orphan himself and he used to sell papers down on the very spot where the Israel Orphan Asylum now stands.

It isn't this, they're upholding, he says, they're flogging innocent babies. Long Beach has room for its sporting the street scene at any time. It is only the fact that he is a request which he believes he has a right to hold at. It is permissible for either him or his partner to one of the judges to remove the child. It is it was wise to have the child carried to a safe distance from the hole. At the last of the player comes into contact with the child, it is his own responsibility to see the hole.

In a very closely contested match one of the players feels that his opponent has driven his ball out of bounds from the table. He is desirous of getting such an opinion from a referee, his next bet, feeling that if he apprehends it is out of bounds he will have a slight edge that may determine his stake in play. His the player such right.

A player has the right at any time to ask a referee, whether his opponent's ball is out of bounds or not before his opponent can complain to a referee his play.

Is there a difference in the penalty when a player in putting, strikes his opponent's ball in match or medal play?

There is considerable difference. In match play there is no penalty and a player's opponent may replace his ball if not he chooses. In medal play there is a one-stroke penalty consequently it is always safer to ask your opponent who is closer to the hole to either lift his ball or play it. In medal play it is necessary that your opponent replace his ball in its exact position to its original position.

ABERSON CONVICTED OF RUNNING DISORDERLY HOUSE

J. J. Abernethy, proprietor of the Parkway Inn, was convicted on a charge of running a disorderly house and fined fifty dollars in police court this morning.

The verdict was reached mainly on the testimony of the police as to the general reputation of the hotel. Chief H. T. Hall testified that he had been informed by leading citizens and by two city councilmen that its reputation was questionable.

Several witnesses were called by the defense, most of whom denied the charges. Dr. George Davis, county health officer, testified for the prosecution in the case. Mr. Abernethy testified that there had been no improper conduct at the hotel with his knowledge and consent. He stated that he had been in active management there about sixty days.
